Jesus told this parable (a story that teaches us something). Heaven is like a man who got up early to get for his vineyard. He said he would pay them a denarius. At about nine in the morning, he told more men to go in his vineyard and he would pay them what was right. He went out at about noon, at about three, and at five, and did the same thing. He told the

At the end of the day, the were paid. Everyone got denarius. The men who were hired first grumbled. They said, "The men and you gave them the same money that you gave us. But we did most of the all day." But the man who hired them said, "I am not being unfair. I told you I would pay you denarius. It is my money and I can pay them what I want. Are you upset because I am so kind with my money?" Jesus said, "So the last will be first, and the first will be last."
